Dear Parents and Carers,

Tractors in Schools:

The Tractors into Schools campaign in 2016 and 2017 was a great success, reaching 6,000 school children, with 176 farmers involved with the project. Today's tractors are wonders of engineering and although some may have seen a tractor in a field or perhaps at the Lincolnshire Show, not many children will have been able to sit in one and find out how tractors help us produce the food we eat every day. All over Lincolnshire, farmers and tractor dealers have been talking to their local schools in readiness for Tractors into Schools week.

Alan and Simon Harrison came into school to talk with the children about farming's modern work-horses and how they help farmers on their farms - ploughing, sowing, cultivating, harvesting and hauling the grain, vegetables, potatoes, livestock feed and energy crops that are produced in Lincolnshire.

Maths, English, science, geography, food technology, design and art, food and farming can be used to help children in hands-on learning activities, bringing their subjects to life in a fun, but safe way. A wonderful morning... Thank you!
